

Miss England®

Press release - June 2026

After placing 2nd runner up in 2025 as Miss Birmingham , Evanjelin hopes to win the place in Miss World 2027 in Tanzania

A woman with Sri Lankan Heritage who won the Miss Birmingham title in 2025 - Evanjelin Elchmanar, 25, is hoping to retain her title as she advances in one of the nation's most prestigious beauty and empowerment competitions.

Sponsored by The Linda Mary Clarke Memorial Award, Evanjelin will be taking part in the semi final at the Melton Theatre Melton Mowbray Leicestershire on Sunday 11th October where the Miss England national finalists will be chosen .

Standing at 1.68 metres tall, Evanjelin is a professional model whose passion for fashion, confidence, and personal development has helped shape her journey to the Miss England semi-finals. Through her participation, she hopes to inspire young women to pursue their goals with determination while embracing their individuality.

Evanjelin's story is as unique as her aspirations. An extraordinary fact about her is that she was the first baby born in Paris on Christmas Day in the new millennium, giving her a truly remarkable place in history. A close runner up to the Miss England 2025 national winner in November 2025 , Evanjelin now hopes to win the title and a place in the next Miss World.

As a Miss England 2026 Semi-Finalist, Evanjelin is committed to using her platform to promote confidence, positivity, and opportunity. She believes that beauty pageants today are about much more than appearance—they are a celebration of leadership, resilience, and the ability to make a meaningful impact within communities having volunteered United Hands Food Bank Wellbeing Hub, based at Smethwick Cricket Club.

"I am honoured to be competing in the Miss England competition again," said Evanjelin. "This journey is an incredible opportunity to grow, connect with inspiring people, and encourage others to help in the community ."

The Miss England competition continues to empower women from across the country, recognising talent, ambition, and community involvement using the ethos Beauty with a Purpose. Evanjelin looks forward to the next stages of the competition and the opportunity to further represent Birmingham on a national stage. The contest includes a sportsround , ethical fashion and a make up free round where natural beauty is celebrated.
