Norwich Music teacher Amy Morris to represent Norfolk in Miss England

Amy Morris, a 27-year-old music teacher and manager and co business owner of Motorhome company Lush Leisure Vehicles has reached the Miss England Final, marking an exciting milestone in her journey and bringing her passion for music, confidence and adventure to the national stage.

Following a series of various interviews and catwalk video entries from across Norfolk over the summer, bosses at Miss England selected Amy from Norwich as the best candidate to represent the county . Lisa Powell, who has been the Miss England Choreographer since 2002 met up with Amy in Norwich to present her sash and winning tiara and presented a bouquet of flowers to Amy in the unpredictable weekend weather!

“ We did have fun dodging the rain , but it was lovely to meet Amy in person” said Lisa

Standing at 5'8", Amy combines her professional life in education and business with a love of performance and helping others discover their own potential. As a music teacher, she works with students to develop their voices and, just as importantly, their confidence.

Away from music, Amy is also involved in the motor home industry, where she helps fit out vehicles designed to give people the freedom to travel, explore and create new adventures.

Amy describes the two sides of her life as surprisingly connected:

“One minute I’m fitting out motor homes and getting my hands dirty helping create vehicles that bring people adventure and freedom; the next, I’m on stage singing powerhouse vocals or coaching nervous students to find the confidence to use their voice. Now I’m incredibly proud to represent Norfolk in Miss England , Norfolk is a place where I always feel safe, supported, and inspired. The kindness here is real. Friends and neighbours who show up, communities that pull together, and a shared pride in our little corner of the world. That’s the spirit I’m proud to carry forward. .”

Amy will have the opportunity to showcase the best parts of Norfolk in her video entry to the Explore the Nation round in Miss England , one of the official rounds in the contest which offers a fast track place to the final 12!

For Amy, the common thread is freedom — whether that means helping people discover the freedom to travel or giving them the confidence to express themselves through music.

Reaching the Miss England Final represents an opportunity for Amy to showcase not only her personality and talents in the Talent & interview rounds, but also the values that have shaped her life and career. Her journey highlights the importance of confidence, embracing individuality and encouraging others to pursue opportunities outside their comfort zone.

As the final approaches, Amy is looking forward to representing Norwich and sharing her story on one of the country's most recognised beauty and personal development platforms Miss England . In the lead up to the event, a sports round is being held on October the 4th in Leicester , and a public vote will be held on the Miss England app .

The next Miss England will be crowned at the red carpet themed event in Leicester at the Iconic Athena venue on Tuesday November 17th .

Amy will be encouraging her family and friends to support her at the event by attending and cheering her on and voting for her in the competition which could lead her to Miss World .

The last Norfolk woman to win the Miss England crown was Jessica Linley in 2010. Born in Norwich and a law student at the time, Jessica went on to proudly represent England at the Miss World final in China.
